Don't read this if you haven't finished your thesis.

Tadataka Yamada -former chairman of research and development for SmithKline Beecham Pharmaceuticals- is quoted in The Lancet of August 12, 2006, that "99% of what we do in industry fails".

John Ioannides revises his PLOS statement from "most" research finding is false to "up to 90%" for a moderate risk factors with limited replication. Given the fact that many negative studies are never published, also academia would be in the Yamada range.

I should have been taught that earlier. Yea, yea.
