SOFTWARE

HIDDEN FEATURE AT PUBMED

1.11.2006

No, it is not really a hidden feature – but keep your mouse on "links" at the right part of the citation, wait for the drop-down, select "Link-out" and there is a good chance to jump directly to the publisher site, yea, yea.

Addendum

The nodalpoint blog" writes about MEDIE, a new PUBMED parser:

...is an â€œintelligentâ€ semantic search engine that retrieves biomedical correlations from over 14 million articles in MEDLINE. You can find abstracts and sentences in MEDLINE by specifying the semantics of correlations; for example, What activates tumour suppressor protein p53? So just how useful is MEDIE and is it at the cutting edge?   semantic search engine that retrieves biomedical correlations from over 14 million articles in MEDLINE. You can find abstracts and sentences in MEDLINE by specifying the semantics of correlations; for example, What activates tumour suppressor protein p53? So just how useful is MEDIE and is it at the cutting edge?