A SENSE FOR JUSTICE

12.05.2007

Hans-Werner Bierhoff (in a recent ZEIT interview) believes that our ability to recognise a punishment as fair/just or not fair/just depends on social norms. The ultimate driving force to sense justice, however, seems to be an inborn trait. I even believe in a QTL - a quantitative trait that can clearly defined and even mapped some time to distinct genetic variants.

Monkeys reject unequal pay (scienceblog:doi:10.1038/nature01963:) in the famous Brosnan study - why should humans do?
