THE ONLY POINT OF CONTACT

10.12.2007

Steven Pinker complains in this week Nature about the recent review of his book "Stuff of Thought".

The fact that I (like most cognitive psychologists) have not signed up to these views is the only point of contact between my book and her review.

While Pinker could have got at least his opinion through, my comments on ORMDL3 remained stuck although I also claimed that the authors of this paper free-associate to her own beliefs.

Yea, yea.
