

PHILOSOPHY

WHAT COUNTS

25.11.2016

Science: Current Issue

MOST POPULAR

-  300+ [Working Life] Family-friendly science Author: Amanda Zellmer
-  200+ [Association Affairs] 2016 AAAS Fellows approved by the AAAS Council
-  100+ [Report] Directed evolution of cytochrome c for carbon–silicon bond formation:
-  100+ [Report] Social status alters immune regulation and response to infection in macaques
-  63 [Report] Retrieval practice protects memory against acute stress More than a decade ago, researchers found that
-  60 [In Depth] Rogue protein's partners offer hope in Parkinson's disease It has been a decade since researchers first identified alpha-synuclein as a key player in the
-  40 [Research Article] An interactive three-dimensional digital atlas and quantitative analysis of the human brain
-  38 [Letter] Research night owls
-  36 [Research Article] Tissue damage and senescence provide critical signals for cell regeneration
-  26 [Perspective] Susan Lindquist (1949–2016) On 27 October, Susan Lee Lindquist, professor of molecular biology at the University of Massachusetts Amherst, died
-  25 [Policy Forum] Ten policies for pollinators Earlier this year, the first global thematic assessment of the status of the world's pollinators was published
-  14 [Editorial] What now for science? Faced with the uncertainty of what the 2016 U.S. election will bring, the scientific community must take a stand