Dear Dr Julian Sale:

Hello, we are a language editing company based in China. Every year, a large number of authors ask us to recommend their articles to suitable journals. So we would like to seek a cooperation with your journal.

We would like to ask your journal to publish 70 articles per year for us. We are willing to pay your journal or you personally 100,000 US dollars for these articles, and the publication fee paid by the author will still be collected by your journal.

Our only request is that all our submitted manuscripts will be reviewed by us and we have the final decision on whether these manuscripts will be accepted or not. Your manuscript system will open an editor role for us and you will provide us with an email address and password of the editorial department. We ensure that all reviews comply with peer review norms, and we will reject manuscripts that fail peer review, and finally select 70 manuscripts that pass peer review.

Looking forward to your reply;

If you are not the right person for this collaborative discussion, please forward this email to the right person for this decision.

Thanks
